

At Northwestern University, Alice Eagly is Professor of Psychology, James Padilla Chair of Arts and Sciences, Faculty Fellow in the Institute for Policy Research, and Professor of Management and Organizations. She has also held faculty positions at Michigan State University, University of Massachusetts in Amherst, and Purdue University.

Eagly received her bachelor's degree from Harvard/Radcliffe and her Ph.D. from the University of Michigan. She is a social psychologist with research interests in many topics, including gender, feminism, attitudes, prejudice, stereotyping, and leadership. Her work encompasses many meta-analyses as well as primary research. She is the author of over 200 articles and chapters in edited books. Among her several books are The Psychology of Attitudes, written with Shelley Chaiken and Through the Labyrinth: The Truth About How Women Become Leaders, written with Linda Carli.

Alice Eagly has received numerous awards for her contributions, including the Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award from the American Psychological Association, the Gold Medal Award for Life Achievement in the Science of Psychology from the American Psychological Foundation, and the Eminent Leadership Scholar Award from the Network of Leadership Scholars of the Academy of Management. She is also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.